

The role of logic within the structure of the condition of human existence

Andrzej Grzegorzczak, Polish Academy of Sciences

The human language, as structuralized by logic, is a basic tool of individual and mass self-steering of man, which has evolved in the course of (evolutionary) development of our kind.

The development of human language and the appearance of a logical structure within it are cognition and communication tools creatively formed by the intellectual effort of human beings, which are indispensable within the ontic condition of our kind and our necessary behaviours facing the challenges resulting from this condition.

The consciousness of this role of human language-related behaviours should be popularized in society and should make the starting point for propagation of the culture of using the language by all human beings.